

Would you like to teach in Lima, Perú?

An aerial photograph of a city, likely Lima, Peru. The foreground is dominated by a large, vibrant green park with a winding path and several colorful paragliders on the ground. To the right, a prominent, light-colored cliffside rises. In the background, a dense urban skyline features various high-rise buildings, including a notable blue and white tower. The sky is clear and blue.

About SVP School:

Santísima Virgen de la Puerta (SVP school) is a private school created in 1997 with the purpose of providing citizenship education and Christian values to our students in Medium-low class neighborhood of San Martín de Porres in Lima, Peru.

We have around 700 students. The age is between 8 to 15 years old. We have 35 teachers of Elementary and Secondary level.

We would like to have teachers who understand Spanish because our command of English is not very fluent. The job would be to work for one month as an assistant teacher and as a trainer to Peruvian teachers in European pedagogical techniques

We can give a place where you can practice your knowledge and learn about the Peruvian culture, we could show you our city.
